Full Service Protection

According to the National Fire Protection Association, warehouse fires are associated with higher average property losses per fire than most other occupancies. Understanding how fires in warehousing and storage facilities occur and the critical factors associated with them is essential for developing an appropriate fire detection and suppression system. That is where The Hiller Companies steps in.

From start to finish, Hiller manages the entire process of design, engineering, installation, service and maintenance of your fire protection system. In many cases, Hiller's experienced engineers will work with the builder and architect of your facility prior to the building completion to ensure the most cost effective and efficient solution; but, no matter the phase of your facility construction, Hiller is equipped to provide a customized solution to best meet your needs.
